The Broken Mirror

A certain young man died and left his young wife a virgin. Since he had never sinned, the Lord brought him into Heaven. He gave him the keys to the place:

"I'm giving you the keys. You may walk here, you may walk over there, go wherever, but you must not enter this room."

In the room was a large mirror, and from there the Lord watched the whole earth, he watched what the world was doing, watched what the people were up to. One day the young man opened that door. Well, when he looks in the mirror he can see everything down below. He saw his village. He looked here and there, and he saw his house. His wife was walking in front of the house, sweeping. After a little while, up comes some other man:

"Oh, good day," he embraces her, kisses her.

Well, the man calls out from above:

"Hey, what is this, what are you doing? Aren't you ashamed?" And he swung to strike him. However when he swung he broke the mirror.

Since the time when the man broke the mirror, the Lord cannot see what the people are doing on earth,

Now people do whatever they want.
